LA Boxing Brings Anti-Bullying Message to Anaheim Hills Elementary

ORANGE, Calif., October 4, 2012 – Anaheim Hills Elementary teamed up with LA Boxing on Wednesday to knock out bullying at their school.

Wearing shirts with the slogan “100 percent competitor, zero percent bully,” mixed martial arts (MMA) fighter Jeff Murray and former MMA champion “Razor” Rob McCullough spoke to kindergarten through sixth-grade students as part of LA Boxing’s nationwide campaign against bullying.

Murray and McCullough discussed with students what a bully looks like, role-played different social scenarios, and taught students what they should do if they witness or experience bullying. They also encouraged students to set goals and be active, as exercise is a healthy way to release stress that may otherwise lead to aggressive and negative behavior.

“We are a PBIS (Positive Behavior Intervention and Supports) school and our goal is to be bully free,” said Principal Sandra Miller.
